Detailed Action

1.) The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2.) Claims 1-40 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stava (6,291,798, cited by applicant) taken with Reynolds et al. (6,177,651). In figures 1, 6 and 7 and the discussion at column 6, line 55 through column 7, line 30, the patent to Stava (6,291,798) discloses an electric arc welding system and method with features claimed, including: providing current to first and second electrodes 342, 330 using first and second power supplies 10 and 10a; controlling high speed inverter A to create an arbitrary waveform as defined by the output on line 152; providing a timing circuit and waveform adjusting circuit at control 360 to control the relative phase of the waveforms and thus the periods of sustained opposite or identical polarity for the waveforms. The claims differ in calling for particular timing parameters (e.g., a cycle period of 10-20 ms with push or pull times of less than 5.0 ms) and in calling for particular waveforms. These differences do not patentably distinguish over the prior art. At the time applicant's invention was made, it would have been obvious to have operated the system of Stava (6,291,798) with the particular timing parameters claimed, the motivation being the teachings of Reynolds et al. (6,177,651) that such are useful when operating multiple a.c. arcs from separately independently controlled power supplies (see the discussion at column 10, line

59 through column 11, line 30 in Reynolds et al. (6,177,651)). In regard to the dependent claims calling for particular waveforms, it would have been obvious to have used any convenient waveform in the system of Stava (6,291,798), including those claimed, based on routine choices for addressing particular welding situations.
